FEATURE CAR

1965 Pontiac GTO

2 Door Hardtop

Owned by Greg LaFratta

After graduating high school, I got a job at W.A. Krueger Printing. Working long hours enabled me to order and purchase a new 1965 Pontiac GTO. Soon after that, one of my friends received his draft notice. This prompted three of us to decide to enlist into the Marine Corps. Returning home on leave, I noticed that the car was missing. I asked my Dad where is the car. His response was that he sold it because it was in the way. My beloved car was gone. This takes me up to about a year ago when I learned of a 1965 GTO that was in a private collection. Just curious with no intention to purchase, I went to see the car. Much to my surprise it was a duplicate of the car that I had owned when I was 17. It was the same color, same interior, same engine and transmission. The only difference was this car had air conditioning and mine didn't. Well, my just curious went to I had to have that car.

Will taking your car through an automatic car wash damage the finish?.

Highlights from article in Family Handyman Magazine

Sadly, the answer is yes. While some types of car washes are worse than others, any time you wash your car, even if you carefully hand wash it, you are essentially applying an abrasive and harsh chemicals to the paint finish and risk making swirls and scratches on the finish. That is the bad news. The good news is that if you make careful choices you can minimize the degrading of your paint's appearance. Plus, most modern finishes include a top coating (clearcoat) that is very durable and should hold up for many years.

TUNNEL CAR WASHES WITH ROTATING BRUSHES

The traditional old style car wash with rotating bristle brushes is much maligned in favor of the new car wash technologies that are described as gentler to your car's finish. But head to head comparisons have shown that old school car washes will actually cause less damage to your car's finish than the newer alternatives because the brushes do not hold onto gritty abrasives, as much as soft cloth scrubbers do.

SOFT CLOTH CAR WASHES

Some car washes that are not "touchless" feature flaps of cloth that massage your car clean and seem less aggressive. But they do retain the abrasives from every car that has preceded yours more than the brushes do. And the latent abrasives in the scrubbers are the primary offenders when it comes to car finish damage.

TOUCHLESS CAR WASHES

Car washes that use the "touchless wash" approach do not have the abrasive effect on your paint finish that car washes that make direct contact with the vehicle do. But there is a trade off. They do not get your car as clean. As a little scrubbing is necessary to dislodge some of the grit and grime on the finish. So they use more caustic detergents to compensate for the lack of direct contact. A touchless car wash is okay once in a while but regular exposure to those chemicals will degrade the finish.

HAND WASHING

Most auto detailers who pursue the perfect car finish insist that only hand washing will get you there. But even with hand washing there are risks. Using the same sponge to clean the vehicles painted surfaces and the tires and wheel wells is a common mistake. That practice introduces abrasives into the cleaning process. Take care to separate your sponges, and to clean them as well as your micro fiber towels regularly.

HERE ARE A FEW TIPS FOR SAFE AND EFFECTIVE AUTOMATIC CAR WASH USE

- If you are waiting in line at a car wash and the vehicle in front of you looks like it is fresh from a week of off roading in the mud, give up your place in line and come back another time. Car washes of all types "self-clean" but not that fast. It takes a few cycles of rinsing to rid the brushes or soft cloth scrubbers of excessive grit that can damage your finish.
- Evaluate the facility. If it is clean and modern on the outside the chances are good that they take care of the washing parts too.
- Most of the "extras" are probably not worth paying for. A spray-on wax will give a nice shine but will fade in a few days. Do not select the undercarriage cleaning, but only a couple of times a year
